

BROKEN is an interesting word to consider as we walk through the Lenten season.

We can understand it from so many angles—
as separation, destruction, damage,
as injustice,
as defeat, sorrow, despair.

But when approached from another angle, broken takes on a new meaning.

We remember, in our broken world, in these turbulent and heartbreaking times for our country and the Catholic Church—

The Lord is close to the brokenhearted.

We can find strength.

We can be released from captivity.

We can destroy the chains of injustice.

We can break the barriers that keep us from a world where dignity and compassion bring the justice we seek. *
